

biographical information

Brit Wittman

General Manager, Executive Compensation

Brit Wittman leads the team responsible for the design, implementation and administration of all fixed, variable and equity compensation programs for the executive population at Chevron. Additionally, he is responsible for the relationship with the Management Compensation Committee of the Board of Directors.

Prior to joining Chevron in 2017, Wittman was the director of executive compensation for Intel Corp where he oversaw the all executive compensation programs, as well as incentive and equity plans covering the entirety of Intel's 105,000+ employee population. Prior to Intel, Wittman held similar positions at Dell Inc, Cisco Systems, Lucent Technologies and AT&T Corp.

Wittman is a member of both the WorldatWork Society of Certified Professionals Board of Directors and the WorldatWork faculty. He has served as chairman of the WorldatWork Executive Rewards Advisory Council and is a former board member of the National Center for Employee Ownership (NCEO). He is a frequent speaker at events for a variety of compensation and benefits organizations, such as: WorldatWork, Equilar, The Conference Board, International Quality & Productivity Center (IQPC), NCEO and Global Equity Organization (GEO).

Wittman has a bachelor's degree in history from Rutgers University.